

My pastures aren't just pieces of dirt to me. They raise the animals that keep me happy. They raise that animals that keep my dad happy. They provide us with an area to grow the food for the nation, for ourselves, and allow my dad to provide for his family. I don't need to write 2 pages on why pastures are important to me. They are so much more than grass and dirt. They are way of life, a nutrient source for the country, and something that makes me extremely happy.

--

Kellie Gregorich

Iowa One Call

Communications and Public Relations Specialist